SECTION C  (10 MARKS)

Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions at the end in the spaces provided in the answer booklet.

Between 1968 and 1972 there were a number of factors that led to the formation of one party participatory state. One of those factors was connected with the multi-party system. For instance, some people campaigned on ethnic grounds so that they could be voted into leadership.

Within the central committee of the ruling United National Independence Party (UNIP) there was tension among some members. Some of them felt dissatisfied with the election of Simon Mwansa Kapwepwe to the post of Vice-President in 1967, beating his rival Reuben Kamanga.

Another factor was that there were many political parties that emerged during this period. Some of these parties were violent. It can also be mentioned that some of these parties lacked proper direction or well laid out programmes or manifestos.

Continued power struggle forced the then Republican President Kenneth Kaunda to dissolve the entire central committee in 1969, replacing it with an interim executive committee. In 1970, Kapwepwe resigned his post mainly because of the friction within the central committee. In 1971, he formed a new party called the United Progressive Party (UPP).

There were differences in ideology between UNIP and UPP. Whereas the former followed the principles of socialism, the latter was pro-capitalist. This led to tension in the country. UNIP accused UPP of destabilizing the political and economic climate of the nation. In 1972, the UNIP government banned UPP and soon after passed a law that abolished all political parties except UNIP.

Political organization during this period was not mature enough to follow multi-party system of governance. Leaders failed to tolerate one another and as a result dialogue could not work. There was suspicion and mistrust among political parties.

Using only short phrases or sentences, list down five (5) reasons which led to the banning of other political parties by the UNIP government in 1972.
